

Return to Fiorano

Charles Scicolone (December 06, 2013)

Alessia Antinori has Restored Her Grandfathers' Estate

About a year ago, I visited Alessia Antinori at the Fiorano estate just outside of Rome. The estate has been in disrepair since the death of her grandfather, Alberico Boncompagni Ludovisi, prince of Venosa. For the fascinating background to this story and how Alessia and her two sisters came into possession of half of the estate see “Fiorano Wine Estate in Italy Making a Comeback” [2] by Eric Asimov in the New York Times

When I visited Alessia had just begun to restore the property and it looked like she had a long way to go

[4]

Alessia Antinori

[5]

The Garden

[6]

~~THE VINES~~
The Vines

[7]

Wine and food are the best friends in the world. In Italy, they are inseparable. Fresh pasta is the perfect choice for lunch. The wine should be a good one. The pasta should be al dente. The sauce should be fresh. The herbs should be fresh. The whole thing should be done with love and care. This is the way to make a great meal. Pasta for Lunch

~~This is a placeholder text line, likely a scanning artifact or a broken link.~~

Source URL: <http://www.iitaly.org/magazine/article/return-fiorano>

Links

- [1] <http://www.iitaly.org/files/alessiaantinori1386378078.jpg>
- [2] http://www.nytimes.com/2013/10/23/dining/fiorano-wine-estate-in-italy-making-a-comeback.html?_r=2&
- [3] http://charlesscicolone.files.wordpress.com/2013/11/img_3192.jpg
- [4] http://charlesscicolone.files.wordpress.com/2013/11/img_3178.jpg
- [5] http://charlesscicolone.files.wordpress.com/2013/11/img_3175.jpg

[6] http://charlesscicolone.files.wordpress.com/2013/11/img_3176.jpg

[7] http://charlesscicolone.files.wordpress.com/2013/11/img_3183.jpg

[8] http://charlesscicolone.files.wordpress.com/2013/11/img_3181.jpg